

Could you benefit from the New Leaf experience?

- yes, if you're sending out resumes with no invitations to interviews
- yes, if you're landing interviews but no offers
- yes, if you look at your resume and feel depressed, knowing that it doesn't even begin to capture what you've really done and the amazing value you know you offer your next lucky employer
- yes, if you're changing your focus or switching careers completely, situations that require a deft hand with resume and interview strategies
- yes, if you're gazing up that career ladder and know that you need to polish your self-marketing portfolio to a high level of professionalism and influence
- yes if you're living in quiet desperation, knowing there's something better out there for you, but not knowing how to get started
- yes, if you're hesitant to "toot" your own horn without sounding like you are bragging
- yes, if you're a new graduate who is having trouble landing an interview in your chosen field and do not want to get stuck working in the non-related, perhaps low-paying job that paid your way through school
- yes, if your education or experience is not Canadian, and you're not having success in breaking that "no Canadian experience" barrier
- yes, if you're of a "certain age" and feeling that your wisdom and knowledge are viewed not as a major plus but as somehow less-than-attractive
- yes, if you've worked many years, and held several jobs, but have always relied on networking and have never had to have a resume before

Truly, no matter what your perceived obstacle may be, there is almost always a strategy to overcome a recruiter's hesitation. If you'd like to explore your options, don't hesitate to call. Your initial consultation of approximately 20 minutes to a half hour is complimentary and you are under no obligation to proceed.
